Lord of Dol Amroth, Bearer of Meledhil, Adrahil II was the twentieth Prince in the House of Dol Amroth, the second line of Lords in Dor-en-Ennil. He was eldest son of Angelimir and older brother of Alphor. He was a Dúnadan descendent of Galador and the father of Imrahil and Finduilas. His chroniclers cited that he also had a remote blood-tie to Adrahil I, although the exact nature of their kinship was unsure. Adrahil II was typical of the High Men of Belfalas, having a noble form, a rich character, and a deep love for the Sea and Elvish things. A close advisor, ally, and vassal of the Steward Denethor II, to whom he gave his daughter Finduilas in marriage, he was the grandfather of both Boromir and Faramir, the Steward's two sons.
